Support life-saving research

Did you know that there are approximately 3 million stillbirths a year globally?

Mercy Perinatal strives to bring mothers and their babies safely home. We have a world leading research team and collaborate with the University of Cambridge, Kings College London and University of Melbourne, to name just a few.

Through the development of a world-first blood test, Mercy Perinatal aims to detect 'danger signals' from the stressed placenta in pregnancies at high risk of stillbirth. Such at-risk babies could be safely delivered and provided with the medical attention they need.

By becoming a sponsor, you make a difference to families in Australia and beyond our shores.

About Mercy Health Foundation

Mercy Health Foundation works with partners, donors and philanthropists to support Mercy Health Australia – a 100-year-old healthcare organisation – to advance care and improve life outcomes for people in need.

Thank you for considering Mercy Health Foundation's annual golf day. It's a day we come together at Kingston Heath Golf Club to raise funds for vital research aiming to save the lives of babies and prevent the devastation of so many families.

At our core we lead with compassion and care. Your sponsorship represents the hope of a better outcome for mothers and their babies.

I want to thank you in advance for your support.

Thank you,

Rebecca MacFarling
CEO, Mercy Health Foundation
